

AUGUST 2021 SUBROGATION NEWSLETTER

Hurricane Ida Special Report - Damage from Falling Trees

We've seen an uptick in cases where a tree has fallen on a neighbor's house, with calamitous results. Hurricane Ida will likely only increase such claims. As the first-party claim by the homeowner is processed, subrogation professionals are usually involved to determine if the tree owner was at fault and if there is a viable third-party subrogation claim. Typically, the knee-jerk defense is a blanket denial based upon the Act of God defense. In most states, the Act of God defense can be overcome if the tree owner had prior knowledge of the risk.

“Ultimate Sanction” Achieved Against Gree for Discovery Failures

In a matter still pending, my clients recently achieved default judgment as a sanction for egregious discovery conduct against Gree USA, Inc., Gree Zhuhai, Hong Kong Gree, and MJC America. Default judgment as a sanction is rare, which is probably why Bloomberg authored a piece on the decision, which can be found HERE. For our part and the community's benefit, we are hosting the briefing that led to the recent default judgment, along with Judge Dinsmore's report and recommendation, which can be viewed HERE. If you have a loss involving a dehumidifier, please read this short article and do me the honor of being involved to ensure those responsible are held fully to account by contacting me, Rich Schuster, at rschuster@mw-law.com.

Avoiding The Sutton Rule: Michigan Decision Makes Landlord/Tenant Subrogation Easier

In the recent case of Westfield, Inc. Co. v. Ritcher, the court held that the tenant was an implied coinsured—and thus shielded from a subrogation suit by the landlord's insurer — but only with regard to the tenant's own apartment or condo. It does not shield the tenant from a subrogation claim for damages to the rest of the buildings, the contents of other residents, and the landlord's loss of profits/rents.

Texas Residential Construction Liability Act 101

We have seen too many cases in Texas where insurers have waived claims and defeated their own subrogation claims for failing to comply with the RCLA which results in a closed file without a recovery. The RCLA as a statute is favorable to contractors. It is a burden to overcome for subrogation professionals and makes recovery on residential construction defect cases difficult. Knowing how to comply with the Act's requirements will increase recoveries, make claims go smoothly, and will keep your insureds well-informed and happy.

MWL's NOLA Office Working Remotely During Hurricane Ida

Our NOLA office is without power and MWL's attorneys and staff are safe and working remotely while power is restored and damage repaired. They are responding to emails and will receive voicemails. The hurricane has not slowed us down. After all, this isn't our first rodeo. Below is a picture of MWL's Partner Jim Busenlener, who oversees the NOLA branch office, walking through his neighborhood after Hurricane Katrina. The NOLA Branch and MWL personnel have the experience to address all your subrogation questions arising from Hurricane Ida. If you should have questions, please contact Jim Busenlener at jbusenlener@mw-law.com.

Verdicts and Settlements

In the past two months, Rich Schuster has made recoveries totaling over $1,700,000 for clients who have been forced to step in to protect insureds who have endured dehumidifier fires. In light of last week's recall by New Widetech of two million more dehumidifiers, the preventable fires caused by these dangerous appliances seem likely to continue, unfortunately. If you have a claim involving a dehumidifier, please contact Rich at rschuster@mw-law.com.
